5 Aman execs surrender

But head of group that duped investors still at large

By Christine O. Avendaño

FEARING retribution from investors they duped of their hard-earned money, five of the six directors of the board of Aman Futures Group have surrendered to the National Bureau of Investigation.

Justice Secretary Leila de Lima yesterday identified the five Aman Futures directors as Leilani Lim Gan, Eduard Lim, Wilnie Fuentes, Noemelle Rodriguez and Luris Lopez, who all turned themselves in on Sunday.

They are now in the protective custody of the NBI.

Still at large is Fernando "Nonoy" Luna, a former janitor and driver who served as manager of Aman Futures, which duped at least 15,000 people, mostly in Mindanao and the Visayas, of P12 billion in just several months this year.

Aman Futures' victims included market vendors, fishermen, civil servants, policemen, soldiers and local government officials. The firm lured in-

Red tape stalls dev't of school in Kalayaan

By Leila B. Salaverria and Tarra Quismundo

A MUNICIPAL official and a lawmaker disclosed yesterday that they were battling red tape in their effort to build a schoolhouse in Kalayaan Islands in the West Philippine Sea (South China Sea) as China insisted the Philippines' territorial claims in those waters were based on an erroneous interpretation of the international law of the sea.

A Chinese national newspaper has called President Aquino "rude" for pressing for the "internationalization" of the Philippines' territorial dispute

Metro in midst of property boom

METRO Manila is in the throes of a property boom described as the best in two decades, reflecting the increasing investor confidence in an economy that only recently began shedding its image as one of the region's basket cases.

Nowhere is it more obvious than at Bonifacio Global City, a commercial and residential property development on a portion of land carved out from the biggest Army base in the metropolis.

Originally sold by a cash-strapped government in the mid-1990s, building got underway in earnest only during the last six years after Ayala Land Inc. took ownership. Under the Spanish-Filipino business clan that runs Ayala, construction is

Tagle: 'Muchacho' now a prince of the Church

By Philip C. Tubeza

THE NEW Filipino cardinal, Manila Archbishop Luis Antonio Tagle, once worked as a muchacho (servant) in the United States.

Like many of his fellow Filipinos working abroad, Tagle had to take on a menial job when his scholarship fund dried up while he was studying in the United States in the early 1990s.

Tagle ran out of funds when Fr. Carl Peter, a prominent American theologian who had secured the scholarship for him, died during his last year of

120 farmers begin 350-km march vs Aurora ecozone project

By Tonette Orejas, Inquirer Central Luzon and Leila B. Salaverria in Manila

A CHURCH-BACKED group of 120 persons has mounted a 350-kilometer march to press demands that President Aquino review a 12,000-hectare economic zone rising in the remote coastal town of Casiguran in Aurora province that they say will drive them out of their homes and keep them impoverished.

The 16-day march by farmers, fishermen and indigenous

P-Noy urged: Boss, you need a break

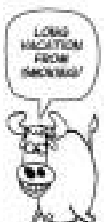

By TJ Burgonio

AFTER BEING cleared by the Ex, President Aquino yesterday got this unsolicited advice from his health secretary: Go on a holiday as US presidents do, but minus the paper work.

Given the demands of his job, Mr. Aquino should go on a long break, say once every quarter, for his own good, according to Health Secretary Enrique Ona.

"Every so often, I reminded that, 'You need a

Filmmaker Castillo dies after finishing autobiography

By Bayani San Diego Jr.
Entertainment

HE GOT his final wish, a stunning conclusion to his colorful life story, with awestruck colleagues paying him homage.

Award-winning filmmaker Celso Ad. Castillo was working on the ending of his autobiography when he passed away at 2 a.m. yesterday at his home in Siniloan, Laguna. He was 69.

His wife, Ophelia Lopez-Castillo, 43, told the Inquirer that the filmmaker had been under a lot of stress, putting the finishing touches on the book, "Celso Ad. Castillo: An Autobiography and His Craft."
